I'd love to learn more from Officials in the Treasury, Secret Service etc...

These are my thoughts.
The argument that the Constitution only applies to Government is so wrong it is laughable. The Democrats, Socialist, and Communists response, lately, to much of what it is stealing , is "we'll just change the "definition" of whatever and make it legal."
The City Attorney has written Legal Opinions suggesting that if it isn't specifically prohibited it is legal. This makes common knowledge and expectations, past traditions, right and wrong, 100 percent manipulative to the point of saying "up is now down" and "red is now black", until "we say it isn't".

The last censorship issues regarding President Trump is the best and latest argument that the Constitution must apply to people in general.

What happens when other Organizations become stronger than so called Governments?

Cryptocurrency is coining. Reality that it is physical or not physical is not relevant, given the change in technologies. Data bits are physical, currency is physical. Credit cards are based on Cash, which is physical, even when represented as bits, IOUs, etc... The United States Currency is created and regulated by the Government. States are not to coin Money. Currency is Constitutionally solely a Government Function.
